EMERGENCY MOTION BY APPELLANTS
GORDAN MORGAN AND JEREMY DE LA GARZA TO STAY APPEAL BOND

COME NOW, Gordon Morgan and Jeremy De La Garza (“Appellants”), pursuant to Federal Rule of Appellate Procedure 8(a)(1)(A) (“FRAP”), and seek this Court’s Order to stay the Court’s Amended Order of July 9, 2013 stating in support as follows.

On July 8, 2013, the Court ordered Appellants to post a bond in the amount of $41,150 within five (5) days, or dismiss the appeal, or face sanctions by the court. That order was vacated by

1 court order (Dkt. 148) due to “typographical error” and was replaced with an amended order
2 granting the appeal bond (Dkt. 149) filed by the Court on July 9, 2013.

3 Appellants Morgan and De La Garza will comply with the District Court’s order pertaining
4 to the $2,000 for the cost of acquiring a transcript and filing documents with the court. That check
5 will arrive at the district court tomorrow, July 10, 2013.

6 However, Appellants respectfully submit that the remaining $39,150 in “administrative fees”
7 (Dkt. 117) is not permitted by Ninth Circuit law, nor is the Court’s command to dismiss the appeal.
8 Appellants respectfully request that the Court stay enforcement of the July 9 Amended Order to 9 allow the Ninth Circuit to decide the validity of the portion of the bond amounting to $39,150.

10 ARGUMENT

11 A Stay Is Required to Permit Review of the Court’s July 9 Amended Order

12 The July 9 Amended Order compels performance by July 14. But, as discussed below, the 13 Order is inconsistent with Ninth Circuit law, and the Ninth Circuit is likely to stay or vacate the 14 order if it is considered. A stay is required so that the Ninth Circuit may review the Order without 15 subjecting appellants to sanctions. But appellants cannot seek a stay in the Ninth Circuit until this 16 Court rules on a motion for stay. Appellants will make a motion for stay and vacation of the appeal
17 bond order on July 12, 2013. Appellants merely ask that the July 9 Amended Order be stayed until 18 the Ninth Circuit rules on that motion. That motion before the Ninth Circuit has a high likelihood of 19 success for multiple reasons:

20 1. The Bond Amount Exceeds What Rule 7 Permits Under Ninth Circuit Law.

21 FRAP 7 allows for posting a bond to ensure that the appellee will be paid any costs that are 22 awarded to him if the appellant is unsuccessful on appeal.

23 The Court’s order for an appeal bond in amount of $41,150 includes $39,150 of costs that are 24 not allowable Fed. R. App. Proc. 7 costs, and would not be awarded if class counsel prevails on 25 appeal.

26 Though plaintiffs allege they are not requesting costs of delay, the additional costs of 27 settlement administration are, despite plaintiffs’ claims to the contrary, very clearly, costs of delay,
28 and costs of delay incurred only because of plaintiffs’ contract with a third party. Every appellate

1 court to consider the question of whether “costs of delay” can be included in a Rule 7 appeal bond
 2 has held that they cannot. Simply put, costs of delay are not available under Fed. R. App. Proc. 7;
 3 rather they only available through a supersedeas bond, which is only available under Fed. R. App.
 4 Proc. 8 or Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 62(d). Vaughn v. Am. Honda Motor Co., 507 F.3d 295, 298-99 (5th Cir.
 5 2007); In re American President Lines, Inc., 779 F.2d 714, 717-18 (D.C. Cir. 1985). Plaintiffs did
 6 not request a “supersedeas” bond. Indeed, when plaintiffs sought to include identical administrative
 7 costs in an appeal bond in Cobell v. Salazar, 816 F. Supp. 2d 10 (D.D.C. 2011), the district court
 8 issued an order to show cause why plaintiffs should not be sanctioned for the request.

9 A district court does not have any “inherent or rule-based power” to impose an appeal bond
 10 beyond “security for payment of costs on appeal.” American President Lines, 779 F.2d at 716, 718-
 11 19. Moreover, the “costs referred to [in Rule 7] are simply those that may be taxed against an 12 unsuccessful litigant under Federal Appellate Rule 39, and do not include attorneys’ fees that may be 13 assessed on appeal.” American President Lines, 779 F.2d at 716. The only exception the Ninth
 14 Circuit has ever recognized is in the rare case of a bilateral fee-shifting statute that defines fees as 15 costs. Azizian v. Federated Dept. Stores Inc., 499 F.3d 950, 958-60 (9th Cir. 2007). The parties
 16 concede that they may not seek such fees in an appeal bond here.

17 2. The Merit of the Appeal Is Not Grounds for a Punitive Appeal Bond

18 The Court, through reference to its March 11, 2013 order for a prior appeal bond, asserts the 19 objections were “without merit.” Dkt. 117 at 3:15. Appellants disagree. As discussed in our 20 Opposition to Motion for Summary Affirmance (attached as Exhibit 3), the Court’s fee order made
 21 multiple reversible errors of law and fact.

22 But the dispute is irrelevant: under Azizian, the lack of merit of an appeal is not grounds for 23 increasing the size of an appeal bond beyond the $2,000 costs of appeal. The “question of whether,
 24 or how, to deter frivolous appeals is best left to the courts of appeals, which may dispose of the 25 appeal at the outset through a screening process, grant an appellee's motion to dismiss, or impose
 26 sanctions including attorney's fees under Rule 38.” Azizian, 499 F.3d at 961. Accord In re American 27 President Lines, Inc., 779 F.2d 714, 717 (D.C. Cir. 1985).

28 3. Alleged Vexatious Intent Is Not Grounds for a Punitive Appeal Bond

1 The Court accuses appellants of “vexatious intent” in the filing of their June 3, 2013 (Dkt.
2 131) notice of appeal. Id. at 3:21-4:3. Appellants dispute this for reasons previously stated, but more
3 importantly, Ninth Circuit law does not permit imposing a punitive appeal bond because of alleged 4 vexatious intent.

5 The Fleury Court abrogates this final prong of the analysis by citing to Azizian. Fleury at *7.
6 The Azizian decision reasoned that, because the appeals court is permitted to award double costs or
7 attorneys’ fees in the instance of a bad-faith appeal, the appeals court is in the best position to address
8 bad faith appeal – after a full review of the merits. Fleury at *7, citing Azizian 499 F.3d at 954.
9 Thus, bad faith is not a factor here.

10 Additionally, although not required to do so by any appellate rule, Appellants offered in a
11 June 20, 2013 letter to counsel (attached as Exhibit 1) to “stipulate to an injunction in the trial court
12 precluding them from withdrawing either objection or any appeal of either objection without trial
13 court approval of the terms of any such withdrawal.” This offer to allow Appellants to make a good
14 faith effort to dispel the concern that Appellants are pursuing a meritless objection was refused by 15 class counsel. (attached as Exhibit 2). Letter from Counsel, 06/20/2013. Appellants offered this 16 stipulated injunction in an effort to assure counsel of the good faith of their appeal. Plaintiffs’
17 agreement to this stipulation would have mooted the question of any bad faith, vexatious prosecution
18 of these Appellants’ objection; that they refused to do so shows that their accusations of 19 vexatiousness were made in bad faith.

20 4. An Order to Dismiss an Appeal for Failure to Post an Appeal Bond Is *Ultra Vires

21 The Ninth Circuit clearly states that “an appellant is not required to post a Rule 7 bond to 22 perfect its appeal.” Azizian v. Federated Dept. Stores, Inc., 499 F.3d 950, 961 (9th Cir. 2007).
23 Simply put, Azizian does not permit an order to dismiss an appeal for failure to post an appeal bond,
24 because that decision is entirely up to the discretion of the Ninth Circuit. Nor does a district court
25 have authority to sanction an appellant for failure to dismiss an appeal.

26 Conclusion

27 For the foregoing reasons, Objectors respectfully request that this Court grant this motion
28

1 to stay pending resolution of a motion in the Ninth Circuit for the vacation or stay of the appellate
2 bond ordered by this Court. Such a motion will be filed July 12, 2013.
